STRIGIFORMES	Strigidae	Typical owls	Striginae		Santa Marta Screech-owl	Megascops gilesi	Krabbe, 2017	R	VU			Santa Marta Screech-owl Megascops gilesi is recognised as a species, having first been noted to differ from the rest of the series of M. choliba seen by Todd and Carraker (1922), and finally described by Krabbe (2017). Genetic analysis indicates that it is indeed distinct from other Megascops , with a minimum uncorrected genetic distance of 6.1% (from M. watsonii usta) higher than that recovered between other Megascops species (Dantas et al. 2016). Unfortunately the detail of the vocal analysis is unclear as the five taxa for which measured parameters overlap do not appear to be identified, and the differences are not scored (Krabbe 2017). Equally only a description of the plumage is given, rather than a treatment that assesses the differences between taxa. However the sonogram suggests at least a moderately distinctive song, and the phylogenetic position indicated by Dantas et al. (2016) is strong reason to accept that the distinction is indeed a valid full species.	Handbook of the Birds of the World and BirdLife International. 2019. PSITTACIFORMES	Psittacidae	Parrots	Arinae		Upper Magdalena Parakeet	Pyrhura chapmani	Bond & Meyer de Schauensee, 1941	R	VU			Pyrhura melanura has been split into P. melanura and P. chapmani following an assessment of the latter by Donegan et al. (2018), in light of the previous split of Maroon-tailed Parakeet into P. melanura and P. pacifica (del Hoyo and Collar 2014). While Donegan et al. (2018) are mistaken in scoring two covarying measurements twice, and only 1 is allowed for habitat difference, which in any case is not accepted here as too vague (the elevational difference may well be responsible for the increase in body size). However, in reviewing the photographs used to illustrate these differences it certainly appears that the blue primaries and the darker crown merit 2 each, the buffy nuchal region perhaps only 1 (3 seems extreme), but the size difference vs. melanura (mean wing 136.8 vs 126.6, tail 125.2 vs 109.9 in Table 1 in Ridgely & Robbins 1988, Wilson Bull. 100: 173-182) clearly scores 2, on which basis the form reaches and is accepted here as holding species rank. PASSERIFORMES	Pipridae	Manakins	Piprinae	Piprini	Painted Manakin	Machaeropterus eckelberryi	Lane et al., 2017	R	LC			Painted Manakin Machaeropterus eckelberryi is accepted as a newly described species following Lane et al. (2017), with additional support for species level divergence from both M. striolatus and M. regulus from a detailed vocal analysis (Boesman 2016), resulting in a score of 7 for M. eckelberryi versus M. striolatus , and 6-7 versus M. regulus . Further, the new taxon greatly resembles M. striolatus aureopectus , which achieves a score of 5 on morphological differences alone from M. regulus (del Hoyo et al. 2016). Versus M. striolatus the score is augmented by 1 for the darker green-olive upperparts and may even merit a further score of 1 for longer wings/primary extension, although this must await a larger sample in particular of M. s. aureopectus .
