Proposal for a directive

Recital 68 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(68 a) This Directive should pave the way for better and more transparent communication to consumers concerning the environmental impacts linked to substances used in consumer and commercial products. In particular, further legislative and non-legislative actions stemming from the adoption of this Directive should pursue the aim of promoting the substitution of the most hazardous chemicals with more sustainable, bio-based, and biodegradable alternatives for all products groups where such alternatives are available on the market. Future initiatives should be coherent with recommendations made by the Joint Research Centre on the sustainability contribution of substances, such as its 2023 technical report on product priorities for the Ecodesign for Sustainable Products Regulation
