to the Commission

Rule 138

Subject: Neo-Nazi marches glorifying National Socialism in Budapest on the 'Day of Honour'

In February each year, neo-Nazi marches glorifying National Socialism are held in Budapest on the so-called 'Day of Honour'. This year once more, thousands of people, many of whom travelled from all over Europe, took part in a Waffen SS memorial march. Swastikas and Nazi symbols can be worn openly, and the march is state-sponsored through Hungarian Government ministries. Weapons, uniforms and Nazi memorabilia are officially provided by the Military History Museum.

1. Is the Commission aware of these marches and the Hungarian Government's support for them?
2. Is the Commission aware that the Hungarian authorities tolerate the use of symbols which are incompatible with the EU's fundamental rights?
3. What is the Commission doing to ensure respect for the EU's fundamental rights in Hungary during the so-called 'Day of Honour'?
