Amendment

22a. Stresses its profound concern regarding the choice of Baku as the COP29 host, considering the blatant violations of fundamental rights, democracy and international law perpetrated by Azerbaijan, namely through an unprovoked military offensive leading to an ethnic cleansing in Nagorno-Karabakh in September 2023; urges the EU to ensure that COP29 is not used by Azerbaijan as a platform to cover up these violations and advance its disinformation agenda, but rather as an occasion for the international community to bring them into focus and remind Azerbaijan of its international obligations;

Draft motion for a resolution
Paragraph 24 a (new)

Draft motion for a resolution

Amendment

24a. Strongly rejects COP29 summit's chief executive and Azerbaijan's deputy energy minister Elnur Soltanov's claims that continued fossil fuel extraction is compatible with the goals of the Paris agreement, especially as the International Energy Agency (IEA) has stated already in 2021 that no new fossil fuel projects are compatible with limiting warming to 1.5°C^{1a}; is highly concerned over fossil fuel industry's ties with Azerbaijan's government and influence over the preparation of COP, for example through the inclusion of president of the state oil company of the Azerbaijan Republic, Rovshan Najaf, to the organizing committee of COP29; points out that on the 20th of March 2024 over 150 civil society organisations published an open letter expressing grave concerns over fossil fuel industries influence and clear conflict of interest in the preparation of COP29^{1b};

Amendment

29a. Stresses that climate and environmental pressures and impacts from consumption and related production put many ecosystems under pressure beyond their regeneration capacity; points out that EU's material and consumption footprints are still far beyond what is sustainable within the planetary boundaries and that progress on circular material use is too slow; recalls the commitment in the 8th EAP to significantly decrease the Union's material and consumption footprints so as to bring them into planetary boundaries as soon as possible; calls on the Commission to propose EU targets for reducing the Union's material and environmental footprints, as well as additional measures to accelerate the shift to a circular economy and sustainable resource use, while ensuring a just and inclusive transition; calls for the mainstreaming of circular economy into other EU policies and fields;

Paragraph 44 c (new)

44c. Stresses that climate change represents a very severe threat to crop production, fisheries, aquaculture and food security in Europe, and notes with concern that the EEA European Climate Risk Report urges to take action at both EU and national level to enhance resilience in these areas; calls on the Commission, as part of the next CAP reform, to better target resilience, for instance through support to the management of risk of prolonged droughts, through promotion of less water-intensive crops and of sustainable practices that enhance ecosystem resilience, such as by improving soil quality and health, enhancing water retention and limiting soil erosion; highlights that EU initiatives promoting a partial shift from animal-based to plant-based food can reduce freshwater consumption for food production, as well as dependency from feed sourced outside Europe;

44e. Recalls the significant impact of the agricultural sector, particularly the intensive livestock industry on climate change and biodiversity loss; emphasises that intensive industrial agriculture and livestock farming should not receive funding, nor be incentivised or rewarded; stresses instead the importance of supporting the development of agroecological and plant-based agricultural practices, reducing animal density and the amount of farmed animals, stimulating local production and investing in the development of regional infrastructure for a more sustainable agricultural sector;

Amendment

44f. Stresses that the IPCC underlined that balanced diets, featuring plant-based foods, such as those based on coarse grains, legumes, fruits and vegetables, nuts and seeds, and animal-sourced food produced in resilient, sustainable and low-GHG emission systems, present major opportunities for adaptation and mitigation while generating significant co-benefits in terms of human health; underlines that the IPCC concluded that by 2050, dietary changes could free several million km² of land and provide a technical mitigation potential of 0.7 to 8.0 GtCO₂eq yr⁻¹, relative to business-as-usual projections^{1a};

Mediterranean is one of the regions most affected by climate change, warming 20 % faster than the global average, with projections of 250 million people facing water scarcity within 20 years^{1a}; notes that the Mediterranean Sea is becoming the fastest warming sea globally, with severe consequences for marine ecosystems, economic sectors, and biodiversity; calls on the Commission and Member States to act urgently, cooperating with Mediterranean partners to implement ambitious adaptation measures and lead mitigation action, focusing on water management, ecosystem restoration, and sustainable economic transitions;

Amendment

49a. Recalls that aviation accounts for 2 to 3 % of global CO₂ emissions and according to The International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) the sector's international CO₂ emission could triple by 2050 compared to 2015; points out that according to the European Union Aviation Safety Agency (EASA) the non-CO₂ climate impacts of aviation activities are, in total, at least as significant as those of CO2 alone and are currently unregulated both in EU and globally; underlines the need to mitigate all aviation emission with climate impact and swiftly put in place regional and global binding policies to mitigate non-CO2 emissions of aviation;

Amendment

49b. Recognises the disproportionate impact of climate change on women and girls, particularly in developing countries where they are more reliant on natural resources for their livelihoods; notes that climate-induced disasters exacerbate gender inequalities, as women often face greater obstacles in accessing resources, land rights, and decision-making processes; believes that gender balance and the empowerment of women and girls are key to an inclusive and just transition; stresses the need for gender-responsive climate policies that ensure women's participation in climate action and leadership roles at all levels;
